Trace different size stars to fusible web, press to wrong side of fabric, cut out each star and place randomly over the quilt. Put as many stars as you want. Machine stitch around each star, use the blanket stitch setting on your machine.

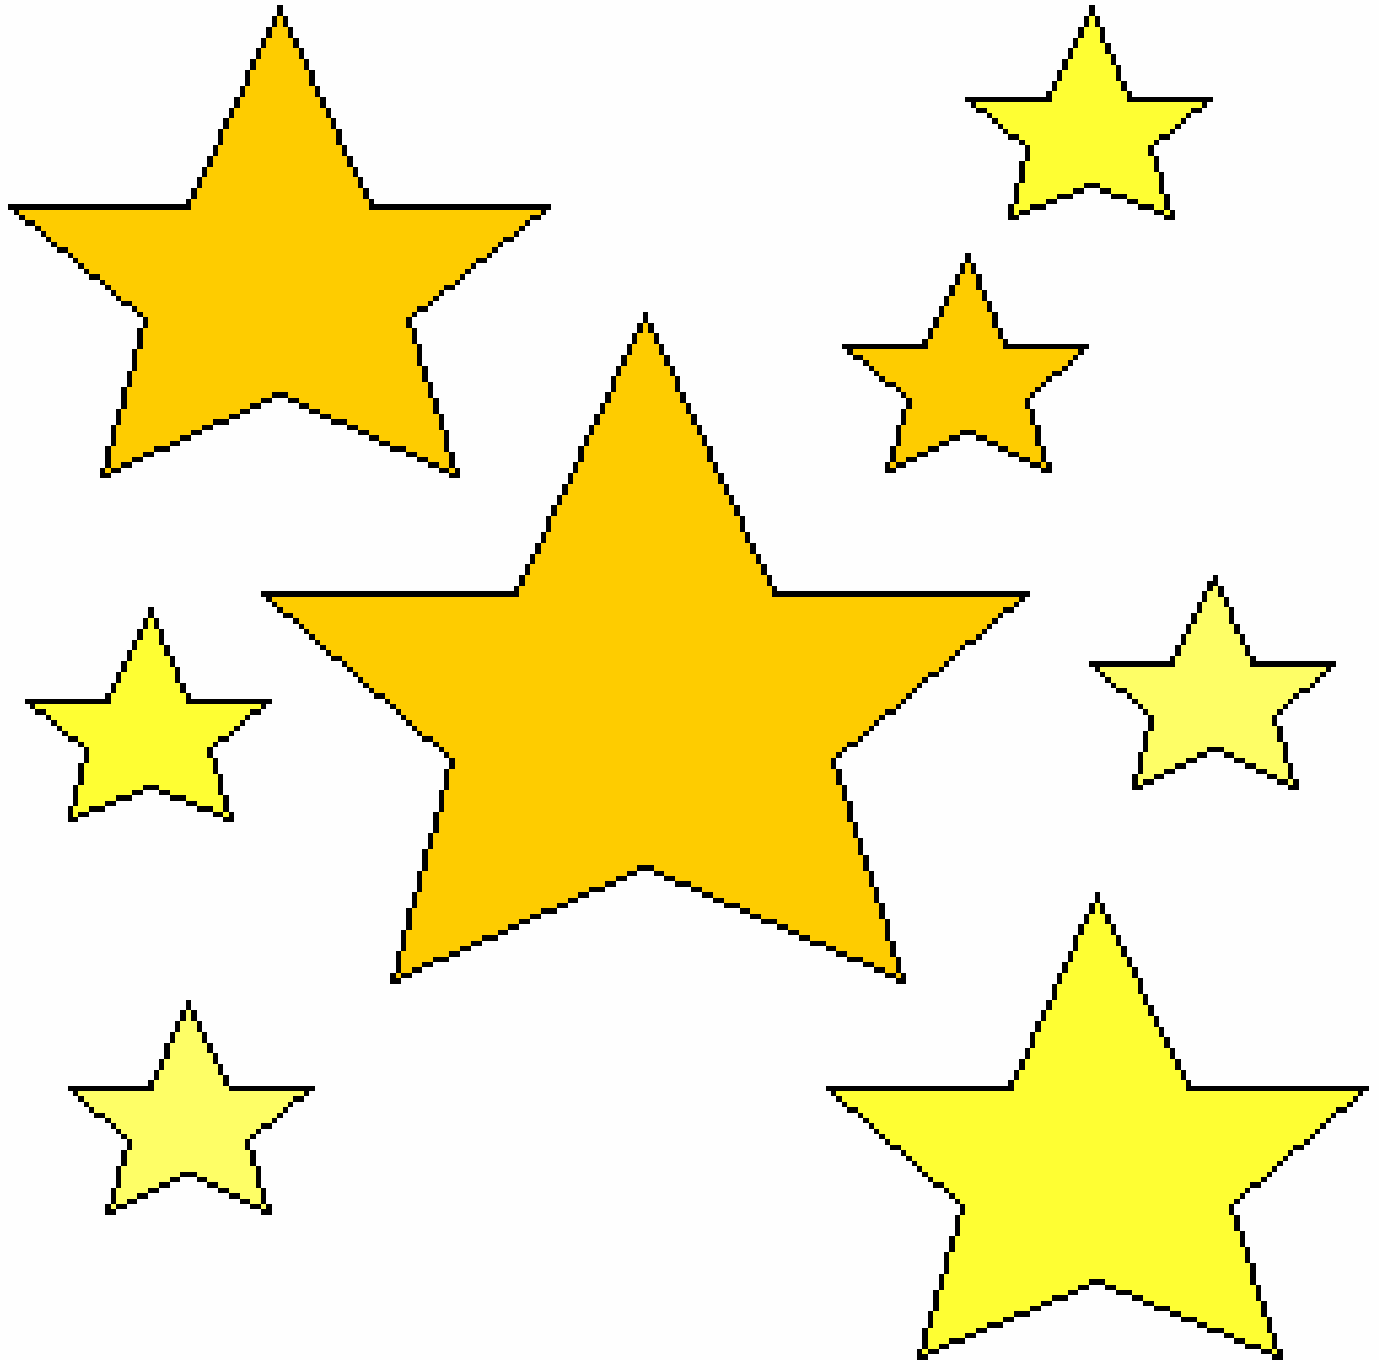

Layer the patchwork with batting and backing pin generously with safety pins to prepare for machine quilting. Stitch in the ditch across the main seam lines. Add free motion quilting to the open areas or however you wish.

Machine Binding

Miter the strips cut for the binding into one long strip. Fold over the beginning of the binding to form a triangle, press, trim to 1/4". Press in half. Place the start of the binding well below the corner along one side, but not in the middle. Pin the binding for about six inches. Start stitching below the pinned area. Miter each corner as you stitch. When the last miter corner is finished and you are approaching the beginning of the binding in the pinned area. Measure the distance left with the binding tail, leave a 1/2" extend below the point of the angle fold at the start. Trim the binding at the same angle. Reposition the pins to include the trimmed tail tucked under the binding starting point. Finish sewing the binding. Press the binding away from quilt on the right side. Turn quilt over and apply 1/4" steam a seam tape over the binding seam allowance. Bring the binding over to the back and press in place. Carefully miter each corner as you go. Stitch in the ditch from the right side along the binding edge.
